COUNCIL MEETS WITH CITIZENS IN C. OF C. ROOM

Officials To Be Guided By Opinions Expressed by Townspeople

SEVERAL ANGLES TALKED

City Dads Not in Favor of 10-Year Clause, Not "Sliding Rate"

City councilmen, merchants and citizens meet at 8 o'clock tonight in the Chamber of Commerce room to express their opinions concerning the commercial and domestic light rates offered by the Southern Ohio Electric Co.

Two Angles Unique

The ordinance is unique in two respects. The rates cover a 10-year period, rather than the usual five, and one clause permits the company to increase or lower rates semi-annually if business conditions for any six months' period, beginning in January or July, warrant a change.

Against Such Length

Councilmen have expressed themselves as opposed to a lengthy contract with the company. The majority of the members favor a contract of two years, and not over three years.

The rates are the same as those presented in Chillicothe and Athens, Athens approved the rates.

Chillicothe council approved the rates during one council session, but later they were vetoed by Mayor James Ford. So far no further action has been taken.

The public meeting was transferred from the council chamber to the Chamber of Commerce room due to the redecorating in the city building.

Break Expected Soon In Clevenger Murder

Mark Wollner

Banking Official Says Wollner Looks Like Man In Doorway

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 21 (UP)—Fred Jones, chief of detectives of Asheville, said flatly today that he believes Mark Wollner is in no way connected with the rape and murder of pretty Helen Clevenger.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 21 (UP)—Sheriff Laurence E. Brown stated virtually all his hope of finding the slayer of blonde Helen Clevenger of New York today on an attempt to identify Mark Wollner, concert and radio violinist, as the mysterious man who stood in the door of the girl's hotel room a minute after her dying screams awakened occupants of rooms nearby.

Revealing that E. D. Pittman, a state banking employee, has tentatively identified Wollner, the sheriff announced that he expected to make public soon "an important new development."

Although the 48 hours for which Wollner could be held legally without a formal charge expired last night, Brown still kept him in solitary confinement, refusing to let even his lawyer see him.

The sheriff refused to expand his statement that he expected important development but he indicated that it would result from discovery that the key with which the killer entered Miss Clevenger's room in the Battery Park hotel was of a master design intended only for use by hotel employees.

His announcement that Pittman had said that Wollner, dark and handsome in the German manner, looked like the man he saw in Miss Clevenger's doorway, made it certain that the "important development" concerned the musician.

TOWNSEND SPLIT SEEMS CERTAIN AS CONFAB ENDS

CLEVELAND, July 20 (UP)—The board of directors of the Townsend Old Age pension organization will be sharply divided in the coming presidential campaign, it appeared today.

With Dr. Francis E. Townsend, co-founder of OARP, Ltd., and the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith ready to stump the nation for William Lemke, third party candidate, other board members prepared to defend President Roosevelt.

Dr. Clinton Woodworth threatened to withhold funds from his eastern division if Dr. Townsend persists in his announced plan to campaign with Rev. Smith and Father Charles E. Coughlin for Lemke's election.

Directors also split at their post-convention meeting yesterday over the feud between the Smiths and the Reverend and Gomer Smith, vice-president from Oklahoma City.

Dr. Townsend announced that Gomer will resign but Gomer, interviewed in New York, said he has no such intention. Two Democratic board members said that if Gomer is forced to resign, they will "see to it" that the Reverend Smith also leaves the board.

ATTACK ON CHILDREN MADE IN EAST

Deep, But Not Serious Burns,
Suffered by Boys, Girls;
Police to Act

TROY, N. Y., July 21.—(UP)—Police searched today for an unidentified person who attacked nine children with acid yesterday, inflicting deep but not serious burns.

Parents and neighbors stormed the police station last night demanding action, while investigators worked on the theory that the acid had been thrown from a second floor window of the house, where the children were playing cards on the porch. The owner of the house, a Mrs. Rane, occupies the second floor.

Apparently none of the victims, seven boys and a girl all under 19 years of age, saw anyone near the porch, which led police to believe that the acid must have been thrown from above.

None of the children was seriously burned, although Leo Purcell, 11, was ordered to remain home for further treatment.

Playing at Cards
The attack came without warning while the group was playing a card game. One of the victims told the doctor who attended them that "smoke seemed to come out of the water" after it had struck.

The screams of the children brought crowds of parents and neighbors to the scene.

The children rushed to a neighbor's house and attempted to wash the acid off with water. "The water only hurt more," the victims said.

Dr. James V. Barrett, called to treat the children, could not determine the type of acid used. He said none was of a second degree type. Dr. Barrett said that several might lose spots of hair where the acid landed on their heads.

MAYOR PLACES PETERS ON DRIVING PROBATION

Robert Peters, son of R. G. Peters, N. Court street, ordered to appear in police court on a charge of reckless driving, was placed on probation for one year by Mayor W. J. Graham and instructed to obey traffic regulations. Officers reported Peters was speeding.

Ward Thompson, 39, city, forfeited a $5 bond posted to appear before the mayor Monday evening on an intoxication charge.

U. S. NAVY GAINS AUXILIARY FORCE BY SHIP SUBSIDY

Copeland - Bland Act Lays
Groundwork for Fast,
New Merchantmen

WASHINGTON.—(UP)—The United States Navy high command assured of authority and money to build the battle fleet up to treaty limits, has turned its attention to merchant-man and auxiliary ship construction now.

The navy has awarded contracts to fill up deficiencies in virtually all categories of warships, and a major portion of these vessels will join the fleet prior to Dec. 31, 1937. The auxiliary construction program, however, has lagged far behind and as a result, the fleet during maneuvers has been hampered seriously because supply and repair vessels were not sufficiently speedy to keep pace with warships.

Enactment of the Copeland-Bland ship subsidy bill, jammed through Congress in the closing hours of the session recently ended, laid the groundwork for the construction of fast merchant vessels, readily convertible into troopships.

Flexible Subsidy Provided
This act authorized the federal government to pay to private builders a construction subsidy equal to one-third of the sum required to construct the vessel in a foreign shipyard. The government in exceptional cases is authorized to increase the subsidy up to 50 per cent of the cost of the construction. These subsidies were designed to offset the lower cost of construction in Great Britain and Japan.

Under provision of the act, it is mandatory for the government to take over subsidized ships in times of war or national emergency and to pay their private owners only the actual money they spent in construction of vessels. If privately owned shipping lines refuse to take advantage of the subsidy, the government is authorized to cancel the ocean mail contracts held by those companies and construct ships on its own behalf. Experts believe the subsidy program will provide a decided impetus to merchant ship construction within the next few years.

Mine Layers Needed
The next problem of the navy is to obtain congressional authorization for construction of fleet auxiliaries such as mine layers, repair

Cruiser Strength Increased
Indicative of the speed at which the battle fleet is being built up to the limits imposed by the Washington and London naval armament treaties is the construction progress report issued by the Navy department on June 10. According to this report, two new aircraft carriers will join the fleet in 1937 and one in 1938. One heavy cruiser went into active service early in June, another will be completed in January next year and a third in the Spring of 1938.

Marvin H. Harlan, El Paso, Tex., national commander, predicted the convention would adopt a resolution urging congress to enact legislation giving disabled veterans preference on government jobs.

"One of the greatest tasks facing us is to find employment for the partially disabled," Harlan said. "As these disabled veterans grow older their opportunity for employment lessens. Then disability prevents them from competing in the open labor market."

Pension Disapproval Seen
Vivian Corby, Cincinnati, O., national adjutant, predicted the convention would go on record opposing a general veterans pension law.

"The government should provide for its disabled war veterans first," he said.

Other resolutions the delegates will present to the convention, Corby said, would involve hospitalization, rehabilitation, em-

RELIEF BATTLE ENDS AS ACTION WINS APPROVAL

Measure Sent to Davey for Signature; Lawrence's Vote Passes Bill

COLUMBUS, July 21—(UP)—Designed to feed, clothe and shelter Ohio's unemployed during the latter half of 1936, the long-fought relief bill today awaited only Governor Davey's signature to make it law.

Both houses of the general assembly early today accepted a second conference committee report, which met objections of rural members who had blocked passage of the measure last week. The revised bill, however, aroused objections from big-city members.

After passing the relief bill, the house adopted a resolution for sine die adjournment Aug. 3. The senate, however, blocked this move temporarily at least, by referring the resolution to the rules committee.

In the senate the relief report received only the bare majority of 22 votes required to pass the bill as an emergency measure and gained the last of the 22 only when Sen. Keith Lawrence (D.) Cleveland, after attacking the compromise bill in debate and refusing to vote on repeated roll calls, finally yielded to pressure from his Democratic colleagues and voted "yes."

The house, where 90 votes were needed, agreed to the bill by a vote of 102 to 3.

The bill appropriates $8,500,000 to be allocated among the counties by formula, and an additional $1,400,000 to be apportioned by the State Relief Commission on the basis of local needs as it determines them. Grants from the $1,400,000 "adjustment fund" must be matched, dollar for dollar, from local funds by the counties that receive them.

The $6,500,000 is to be allocated, 20 per cent in proportion to population and 80 per cent in proportion to local relief expenditures in the earlier half of 1935.

All large counties except Cuyahoga have available, in addition to their state allocations and grants, unexpended balances from Carey Poor relief bonds previously issued or further bond issuing power as yet unused, according to figures compiled by the State Relief Commission and distributed to legislators.

If bonds are issued to the limit, the totals of these amounts will be available in the respective counties to supplement the state funds.

Cities Mistakes
Opposing the compromise bill, Senator Lawrence told his colleagues it was "nothing but an abject and disappointing surrender to unreasonable and unreasoning demands of certain members of the house of representatives."

"Thousands of men, women and children will be under-nourished and unclothed and forced to live in filth and squalor as a result of this bill," he said.

Representatives Albert J. Mayer Jr., (R., Hamilton), Lody Huml, (D., Cuyahoga) and Al Kalb, (D., Ottawa) led the fight for the bill in the house. Both parties' floor leaders, William M. McCulloch (R., Miami) and Frank R. Uible (D., Cuyahoga) also were active in support of it.

"Hot Trail" Is Traced
SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Federal Writers' Project workers believe they have found a new origin for the expression "hot trail." They have discovered that the only Padre explorers of California scattered mustard seed as they advanced into the unknown country, and when they wished to return a few weeks later had only to follow the yellow trail of mustard plants.

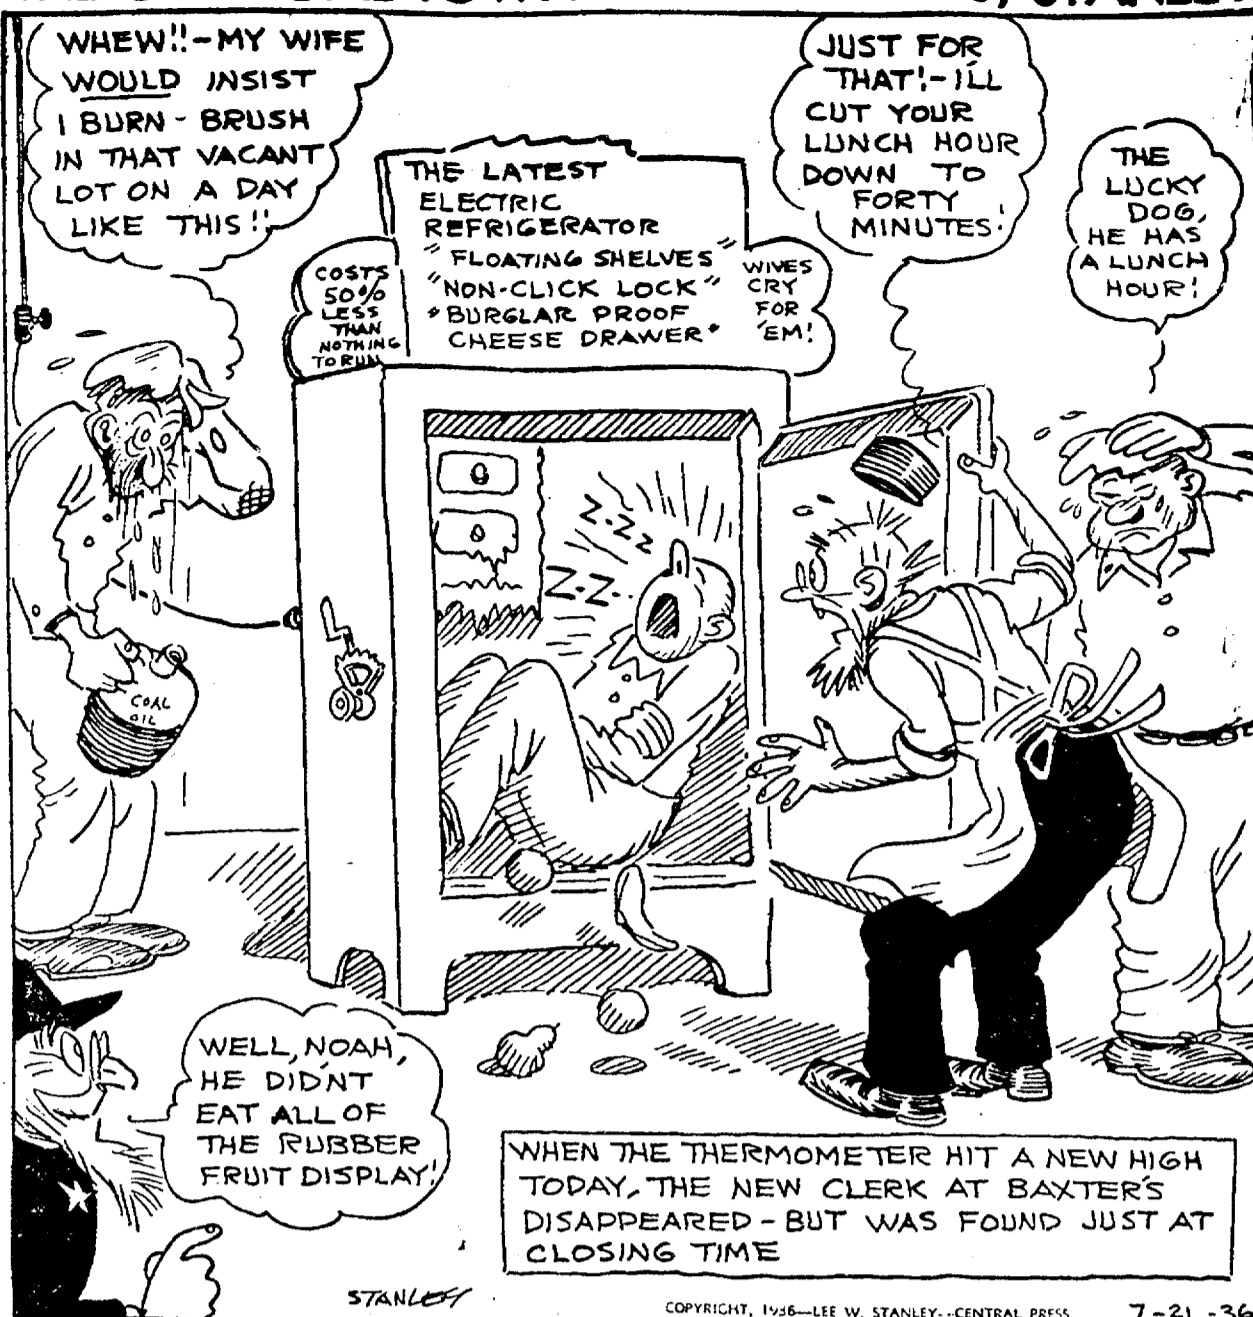

Police Out of Bounds
SAN RAFAEL, Cal. (UP)—Attorney General Webb has settled the question of when is a policeman not a policeman. He has ruled against the neighboring habit of borrowing the police of another for parade and escort purposes or of even answering emergency calls. His ruling was that a policeman is only a policeman within the precincts of his own municipality.

Library Notes

OLD AND NEW RUSSIA

The old Russia has always held color and mystery in its stories for Americans young and old. Now young Russians are helping to make a new world far different from the one before the Revolution, but the stories of the new one are just as fascinating, just as colorful and full of thrills for young people as those of Czarist times. The public library has a number of fine stories that will appeal to readers in their teens.

"Kirdy" by Harold Lamb is a fast moving tale of the Cossacks of the seventeenth century. Kirdy and Nada travel far and have many adventures to uphold the honor of the Cossacks against an impostor Czar.

Theodore Harper, for many years an engineer in Siberia where he helped to build the Trans-Siberian railways, has written two splendid books for boys; "Siberian Gold" and "His Excellency and Peter". Both stories center around the Russian boy Peter and his American engineer friend and are full of the mystery and adventure that Siberia held during the period between the Russo-Japanese War and the World War. The second story has been described as "a rattling good tale".

"Nikita" by Frances B. Phelps is a well-written story of a Cossack boy, prior to the Revolution. Nikita bravely makes the long trip across Siberia to meet his father, experiences many adventures, through an accident is deprived of his memory, and is befriended by a noble family, whom he later saves from a Nihilist plot. At last he is given an opportunity to develop his great talent as a violinist.

Three good stories for girls are "Little Princess Nina" by L. A. Charskaya, about a girl of the Caucasus who goes to Petrograd to school; "Mashinka's Secret" by Sonia Daugherty, in which a girl from the country goes to Moscow as companion to a crippled girl and has exciting adventures with a Nihilist family; and "Masha" by Sonia Mazer, which tells of a peasant girl and her adventures before and during the Revolution.

Among the most popular stories in the library are the four by Helen E. Haskell about the Russian girl Katrinka and her family. The first "Katrinka," tells of how she was left with her brother Peter when her parents were exiled to Siberia, but how she danced her way into the hearts of those who knew her and finally realized her ambition of entering the world renowned Russian Institute of the Ballet. In "Katrinka Grows Up" there is romance along with the color and excitement in the life of the young dancer. "Peter, Katrinka's Brother" will be enjoyed by boys and girls alike. Peter is a young pioneer in the new Russia and the episodes deal with the trials and adventures of those born in the old Russia but who are working to make a new land and life. "Peggy Keeps House" tells of a girl of Russian and American parentage who becomes the wife of Peter and learns to keep house in the new Soviet way. There are harrowing experiences for Peggy. Katrinka has a place in this book too, teaching the little Nadya to dance, so that she may enter the Ballet School carried on by the new government. The books, as a series give a faithful picture of life during the past twenty-five years in Russia.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Glorious music, punctuated by one of the oddest detective mysteries ever written into fiction—the murder of a tenor before 20,000 people in the famous Hollywood Bowl—these are the highlights of the screen's first operatic detective story, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Moonlight Murder," now playing at the Cliftona theatre.

The background is a gala performance of "Il Trovatore," staged in the great natural bowl with hundreds in the cast and with spectacular settings and costumes. The tenor drops dead, victim of a fantastic scientific murder. Suspicion falls on opera stars and others as Chester Morris, in the role of the detective, copes with the mystery, aided by his sweetheart as played by Madge Evans.

The chase after a lunatic, the machinations of a weird Swami, a creepy murder in a dark chamber, these are elements of thrill interspersed with gorgeous opera which is an integral part of the drama itself.

MOVE TO REPEAL FOOD SALES TAX LOSES IN HOUSE

Committee Declares Law Cannot be Safely Ended; Revenue is Needed

COLUMBUS, July 21—(UP)—The Ohio House of Representatives today defeated a motion to consider a proposal to repeal the sales tax on food, and a senate investigating committee reported the tax on food "cannot safely be repealed at this time."

The senate committee report also blamed the state tax commission for failure to enforce the present sales law properly, resulting in an estimated loss of $11,000,000 (M) in tax revenues this year.

"It is evident that much loss in revenue, which the state and its subdivisions are in sorry need of, must be attributed to a large extent to the failure to enforce the law," the senate report stated.

Would Finance Relief
"This loss would finance the relief program of the state and make up the deficiency in the foundation school program for the present year, and the facts lead the committee to believe either the system or the personnel of the administration might be improved."

The house defeated a motion by Rep. Frank Uible to bring the governor's tax repeal bill up for consideration by a vote of 44 to 39, with Republicans voting solidly against the measure.

The bill, as reported to the house by the taxation committee, would repeal the sales tax on food, clothing costing less than $10, medicines and fuel for domestic consumption. The governor had asked only a repeal of the tax on food, but the committee amended the bill.

Because house leaders plan no further regular sessions before sine die adjournment, members predicted the tax repealer bill is dead.

Rep. William M. McCulloch, Republican floor leader, said that "if we repeal as much of the sales tax as advocated here tonight, it would result in chaos."

831 Violators

Reporting that its investigators had found 831 violations of the sales tax law by Ohio vendors, the senate committee blamed violations on:

1. Lack of knowledge as to changes in the law.
2. Failure of the vendor to keep a sufficient amount of stamps on hand.

The report also asked the tax commission to explain why sales tax collections on the sale of food have dropped nine per cent from collections of a year ago.

"With employment showing an increase over 1934, and in many industries increasing wages, there is a falling off in receipts from the sale of food," the report said. "It must be admitted this is almost unbelievable."

The investigation was made by a committee named last year and was the committee's second report. It was signed by Senators Foss, Pollock and Emerson Campbell.

The senate last night voted to appropriate $25,000 for the purchase of a 40-acre tract to be used for a state park near Lorain. The park is to be used mainly by negroes.

THE POWER RATE

MEMBERS of city council provide Circleville citizens an opportunity tonight to state their stand concerning the new rate offer submitted by the electric company several weeks ago. The open meeting, to be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, has been arranged to give every person an opportunity to say what he, or she, thinks about the offer.

The electric company is reducing rates in its offer to Circleville council. It, also, is asking a 10-year contract, and the ordinances provide for permission to increase or reduce rates depending on business.

Do you believe the contracts are fair? Or are you opposed? Council gives every person a chance to make a statement. It is up to the citizens of Circleville to show the officials the proper course to follow.

A POPULAR KING

KING EDWARD VIII of England has enjoyed undiminished personal popularity since boyhood. Through his own native appeal, rather than studied efforts to cultivate the favor of his people, the new King of England has always moved in an atmosphere of friendliness, whether the events of the day took him into the hovels of the poor, whose welfare has been close to his heart, the night clubs of Paris and of London, the fields of sport in his own country or the chancelleries of state.

Even among radical elements, produced by extreme misery and poverty, there has been a consistent feeling of kindness for the Prince and now the King.

The head that wears a crown, however, is naturally a focal point for the pentup bitterness of the vicious and the irrational. The attack upon the life of King Edward is, in view of the affection in which he is held throughout the world, a shocking incident, even though it must be accepted as a part of the price that must be paid by those at the controls of the destinies of nations. The news that he met the crisis with courage and composure is not surprising. He was known to be in possession of these qualities.

There is cause for gratification in the fact that this bold attempt at violence failed.

The Interests: A kind of goblin that politicians blame when they fail to keep impossible promises.

Italy looks like the market for two-car garages, as those eight-year-old warriors must not leave their artillery on the lawn.

Every town has at least one easy mark who will work his head off if he is made the chairman.

World At A Glance

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Occasionally one hears the prediction that no single presidential ticket will have a majority-over-all in the next electoral college, thus throwing the decision into the house of representatives.

The same prediction was heard in 1912, the year Woodrow Wilson, William Howard Taft and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. It was heard again in 1924, when the race was a three-cornered one between Calvin Coolidge, John W. Davis and Robert M. La Follette I.

These 1912 and 1924 predictions seemed likelier of fulfillment than the present one.

Colonel Roosevelt and Senator La Follette were stronger third-party candidates than Representative William Lemke, the current campaign's independent, promises to be, and a mighty strong independent is needed to create an electoral college deadlock.

ALL SPLIT? If an independent aspirant could win, in his support, all anti-Democratic and anti-Republican elements, he might tie the electoral college up in a bowknot. His weakness is that the disgruntled folk are all split up.

Four years hence, who knows? President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers unquestionably has in mind the organization of a Farmer-Labor party for 1940.

But even Lewis doesn't think it can be done now.

NOT FOR LEMKE

So Lemke will not get the Lewisites this time (if ever); they see their bread pro-Rooseveltianly buttered as to 1936.

He will not get the A. F. of L.; that is non-partisan, not Lemke-ite at all.

He will not get the assorted Progressives—the La Follette Wisconsinians; the Norris Nebraskans; the Borah-ites.

Of course he will not get any conservatives.

Assuredly he will not get any of the extreme radicals—such as the Norman Thomas Socialists or the Earl Browder Communists. It isn't either. His sponsor, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, denounces them.

NAVY KNEW ABOUT FARNSWORTH

WASHINGTON—There is an interesting inside story behind the sudden yarn about spies in the Navy. That is why the State Department and even the Naval higher-ups are not going to do much about it. The idea that our army and navy are honeycombed with spies is pure bunk.

Of course, there are one or two in the Navy who really believe in the spy-honeycomb. Chief among them is Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, bearded ex-commander of the fleet. About one year ago Reeves' son was killed in an air crash, and there was muttering that the crash was caused by sabotage.

Ever since then Reeves has seen spies everywhere. He even issued an order prohibiting any officer or enlisted man on any ship from taking a camera aboard. The order was so grotesque that Washington wired to the West Coast wanting to know if they had understood him correctly.

It is significant that when Reeves returned to the East Coast (he is now with the Navy General Board in Washington) the spy scare cropped out here.

But that isn't the whole story.

KNEW FARNSWORTH

In the first place, the Navy had known about former Lieutenant Commander John S. Farnsworth for some time, but never had worried about him. The things he did weren't considered important. He was something of a nervous and alcoholic case, as evinced by his insistent demand for a drink at the time he was arrested.

Most of the stuff he sold to the Japanese was so valueless that the Japanese were foolish to buy it. This included some information regarding a bombing sight which he himself developed, and which was pretty well known anyway; some old signals, which are changed every six months; and some "restricted" news letters which although marked "confidential," are merely press summaries prepared for officers who don't have time to read the papers. The Japanese could have got the same information from the daily press.

The most confidential thing Farnsworth is alleged to have sold was an out of date manual on ship maneuvering. And it is significant that this took place in May, one year ago, and the Navy knew about it at the time.

Farnsworth also had tried to hire himself out as naval observer to various newspapers, and this was what proved his undoing.

A few weeks ago, a couple of newspapermen, working in co-operation with spy-minded Navvites and G-Boss J. Edgar Hoover, decided to pump up the story. They had Farnsworth shadowed, but apparently got nothing damaging. For, when they preferred charges, they had to reach to an incident of fourteen months before.

When the story broke, spy-minded Captain W. D. Puleston, chief of Naval Intelligence, refused to give out information to other newspapers until 5:30 A. M., explaining that the Navy had to give first break to "the exclusive author."

Still, the horse and buggy would have been dangerous, too, if the driver had been ignorant of good manners.

CHAPTER 1
THE CLOCK in the ladies' lounge struck seven.
Gay heard it above a multitude of other sounds: roaring of motors outside the club entrance; switch of revolving doors; jangling of telephones; clatter of conversation. On Saturday night, the lobby of the Pontchartrain club was the noisiest spot in Detroit. Gay thought.

It was fun, though! This was Gay's first week as check girl at the Pontchartrain, and she loved it. The hubbub and confusion. The continual procession of men and women passing through the lobby, sleek and arrogant in their evening clothes. Even though you weren't part of it yourself, it was exciting to be on the sidelines, looking on.

No one realized, or cared, that she was watching. She stood behind the check counter, a demure, slim figure in her gray silk uniform.

"Here's your check, sir."

"The cigarette lighter out of your pocket? Certainly, sir."

"Just a minute, miss, and I'll take your things."

"You're quite welcome, sir."

A tall, lean young man in dinner clothes tried to give her a tip. Gay flushed. He must be a new member or someone's guest.

"I'm awfully sorry. We're not permitted to accept tips. Thank you just the same, though."

The young man flushed a little, too. In the tanned bronze of his face, his dark eyes were smiling steadily at her. Almost as though they were friends, Gay thought.

He walked toward the elevators, but before entering the car he looked back and smiled again at her. A charming smile—half friendly, half questioning.

"Would you mind giving me a little attention?"

Gay came abruptly back to earth. A girl in green georgette was tapping on the counter.

"Do hurry," the girl fretted. "People are waiting for me, upstairs."

Gay checked the gold brocade wrap with racing fingers.

"Yes, miss. I'm so sorry."

Only 15 minutes more. Then the other check girl, Jean Briggs, would come on duty. Gay realized suddenly that her arms ached. Funny, you didn't notice you were tired till someone was rude or impatient.

The pile of wraps on the check counter seemed never to diminish. Overcoats, with gloves dripping from the pockets. Galoshes—for it was raining outside, the dismal sleet of late March. Gorgeous fur coats. Thin jackets of ermine. Fragile chiffon capes with fox or sable trimming. Gay had to work fast to keep up.

She slipped each garment carefully onto a hanger, handling the expensive wraps carefully. What would it be like to own adorable things like these; to snuggle your chin into soft furs—mink or silver fox, or chinchilla? Would she, Gay Elwell, ever have such luck as to marry a rich man, who would buy wonderful furs for her?

Why not? If you were smart—if you met somebody with money, and played your cards right—

"How's it going, kid?"

"Too busy," she answered. Gay knew Jean Briggs had arrived. Rough, friendly Jean, with her bright red hair and good-natured smile.

Gay answered cheerfully. "Everything's just fine!"

The other girl set to work, moving with the automatic precision that comes from long practice. "Better scram while you have the chance," she advised.

"There's no particular rush. I'll help hang these coats."

"What a pal!" Jean's whisper was filled with mock admiration.

"I'm awfully sorry. We're not permitted to accept tips."

"How come you're not in a hurry to get away? No heavy date, to-night?"

"You know perfectly well I haven't any date, for tonight or any other night!" cried Gay, resentfully. She and Jean were close friends: they shared a tiny, furnished apartment, and there were no secrets between them.

"All I've got to look forward to," Gay went on, "is chop suey supper and a movie, which I'll pay for out of my own pocketbook."

Both girls kept their voices carefully lowered. Jean handed a check over the counter, and in a momentary lull of work stared curiously at Gay.

"You sound kind of sour. Don't you like the movies any more? There's a swell one at the Paramount."

Gay hesitated, then words came in a torrent.

"I'd like to have some real fun for a change. Here it is Saturday night, and you know I have that darling new dress and hat I've never even worn, yet. But what of it? Where can I go?"

Her voice rose. "Look at all these other girls—the ones who come in here, I mean. Having dinner parties, going to the theater, doing all sorts of things! It isn't fair! Why should they have everything, while you and I—"

"Soft pedal! Somebody'll hear you!"

Another group of dinner guests had sauntered across the lobby, and were flinging wraps and overcoats on the counter. While Jean handed out checks, Gay got her locker keys and hurried away.

Downstairs, in the help's dressing room, she slipped off her uniform and stood frowning at the mirror over the washstand. In brief pink teddy, with blonde hair unpinned and rippling over her shoulders, Gay was arrestingly pretty. But her consciousness of this only heightened her mood of stormy rebellion.

What good did it do her to be pretty? No one seemed to notice! That one man tonight—the tall, bronzed young man with smiling dark eyes. He'd seemed interested. Then he'd gone on upstairs, and probably forgotten her completely. It was maddening! And she'd hoped that, working at the Pontchartrain club, she'd meet some attractive men immediately.

Well, she was meeting them, all right! Gay winced, half laughing at herself. The trouble was, they were seeing her across the barrier of a counter. She wasn't a human being to the men who came into the club: she was just the check girl.

Gay looked around the dressing room, hating it. Why did it have to be so ugly? Why wasn't it like the adorable pink and silver powder room, upstairs?

How different down here in the basement! Faded linoleum; uncurtained windows; battered furniture.

"Oh, well!"

Gay shrugged, crossing the room to the locker where she kept her street clothes. While you were poor, you had to accept ugliness as part of your life, but if you were pretty, and smart, you didn't need to stay poor forever!

And at that, the dressing room at the Pontchartrain was no uglier than any of the other places to which she was accustomed. The furnished flat that she shared at present with Jean Briggs wasn't much better. And back home in Traverse City, where Gay had lived with relatives since the death of her own parents, things had been lots worse.

She grimaced, now, as she recalled the ramshackle frame house, built close to the railroad tracks, on the outskirts of town. The dirt and untidiness. The constant wailing of children. Aunt Sophie and Uncle Fred hadn't liked it very much when she left, to go to Detroit. They thought she ought to be perfectly satisfied there with them: working all day as typist at the lumber company, then coming home to help with housework.

"After all we've done for you!" Aunt Sophie had cried, indignantly. "You should think you'd be ashamed. You've got a good job, and a good home, here with us. What more do you want?"

There was so much more she wanted. Gay hadn't even tried to tell them, for they would have thought she'd gone crazy. So she said nothing; simply made her plans with the ruthless, clear-eyed determination of modern youth, and when she had enough money put aside to finance herself, she had packed her suitcase and taken the train to Detroit.

PSYCHED OUT OF GAME

AROUND New York, at least, one hears comparatively few psychic bids. In the long run they do not pay. I have been abundantly proved of time such an epidemic occurred. Their chief value was strategy. Today we have, however, a case where North and South allowed themselves to be cheated out of a game by West's bidding. It was funny.

Only North and South were vulnerable. Bidding went: South, 1-Diamond, but his best bid was 1-Spade, which would have resulted in game and rubber; West, 1-Spade, feeling that probably two major suit calls lurked somewhere around the table; North, doubled, that suit; West, 2-Hearts; again North doubled; West, 3-Clubs; East, 2-Hearts, even if partner had been doubled; South, doubled; West, 4-Clubs; South doubled, but by this time East realized what really was going on; he passed.

Had South made an opening bid of 1-Spade, as most players would have done, as an opening bid of 1-Diamond, followed by a spade call from South would have shown a longer minor than major suit. Of course in this particular case North would have bid spades, had not West tricked him out of doing so. As partner already had bid, North's call of 2-Spades over the psychic 1-Spade by West would have pictured to South North's hand as very powerful in diamonds, with no losers in spades.

There is no certainty that South would have made 5-odd at spades, as he quite probably would have played his Ace, thus having to give East a trick.

No WONDER EVERYONE IS SAYING:

"My next refrigerator will be KELVINATOR"

We, too, say the 1936 Kelvinator is a fine refrigerator. We like the way the company has answered the questions that wise buyers ask—about temperatures, operating cost, service. Kelvinator has answered them definitely and emphatically.

It has answered with Visible Cold—a Built-In Thermometer shows you that your food is being kept surely, safely, dependably cold.

It has answered with Visible Economy—for not only does the new Kelvinator use one-half to one-third the current—but a Certificate of Low Cost of Operation shows you, in advance, that current consumption will be amazingly low.

It has answered with Visible Protection—for a 5-year Protection Plan gives you signed assurance of long years of service.

And the 1936 Kelvinator is a beautiful refrigerator... designed with the aid of Count Alexis de Sakhinofsky.

Furthermore, it has dozens of conveniences to lighten the work of preparing meals—such as flexible rubber grids in all ice trays, automatic defrosting switch, vegetable crisper, and many others.

To those who have old-fashioned automatic refrigerators, we suggest that you compare Kelvinator's operating cost with that of yours. Quite possibly the difference alone would pay for the new 1936 Kelvinator.

Frank Fay to Present Irene Castle on Friday Evening Program

STYLIST TO TALK ABOUT MANY THINGS ON RADIO

Dorsey and Rolfe Take Over Places Left by Waring Band

The beautiful Irene Castle, a member of the dance team whose fame has never been surpassed on the American stage, will be the guest of Frank Fay on his broadcast "Frank Fay Calling" at 7:30 p. m. (EST) Friday. The tall, stately lady, who is now Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin, is scheduled to discuss a variety of subjects, ranging from her deep interest in the welfare of domestic animals, to her stage experiences, on the program heard each Friday evening over a WJZ-NBC network.

Irene Castle is one of the names which will go down in the history of the social development of this country. It was she, world renowned dancer, brilliant star of silent motion picture screen, who first cut off her long tresses and started the fashion of bobbed hair. Time and again she was selected as the best-dressed woman in America, and, with her husband who was killed during the war, is credited with having started America's national interest in ballroom dancing.

In addition to chatting with his guest star of the evening Francis Anthony Fay will sing several new songs in his own manner. Bobby Dolan and his orchestra will provide the accompaniments.

DORSEY AND ROLFE
A "double feature" will be offered to radio listeners during August when two different musical programs take over the CBS and NBC spots that will be vacated when Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians take a month's vacation from the air-waves.

The Tuesday evening broadcast, heard over the Columbia network at 8 p. m., EST, will feature Tommy Dorsey's orchestra. The distinctive swing music of the Dorsey orchestra will be picked up at the Texas Centennial in Dallas. With the orchestra two soloists, Edythe Wright and Jack Leonard, will be heard. The first of the Tommy Dorsey programs will be broadcast August 4 and will continue through August 25.

On Fridays at the same time but over a National Broadcasting System network, B. A. Rolfe's orchestra, with Richard Bonelli, famous operatic baritone, and the "Three Men About Town", will be heard, with the program emanating from Radio City.

Richard Bonelli, a native of Port Byron, N. Y., is internationally famous for his work in opera, on the concert stage, in motion pictures and in radio. He has been guest soloist several times on the Ford Sunday Evening Hour.

The popular "Men About Town" trio is comprised of Frank Luther, Phil Ducey, and Jack Parker—a truly all-star group since each member of the singing group is a star radio soloist in his own right. The pianist and arranger is Will Donaldson.

Picked up: Phil Regan leaves for Hollywood September 18 to film "Join the Marines". Fields and Hall, the NBC song-laugh team, last week completed fifty hillbilly recordings.

Carmel Ponselle's contract with Broadway Varieties has been renewed until the end of 1936. Lily Pons has been set for an August appearance on the Radio Theater to do a version of "Conversation Piece". Benny Fields leaves the air July 30 for his trip to Hollywood and movie making.

JACKSON SCHOOL BOARD PURCHASES SIX NEW TRUCKS TO HAUL ITS PUPILS

STOUT AFTER MONDAY CONFAB

New Vehicles to be Ready for Use Sept. 1; Educators to Hire Own Drivers

Deciding to own and operate its own buses rather than hire drivers, the Jackson township board of education, meeting Monday, signed a contract with James H. Stout, E. A. Minn, street motor dealer, for six new Dodge trucks with Wayne bodies. The trucks are to be ready for delivery by Sept. 1.

The purchase price was not disclosed.

Four of the vehicles will be one and one-half tons 16 feet long and sufficient to carry 45 pupils; the other two will be two tons, 18.7 feet long to carry between 50 and 60 passengers.

The school board will employ its drivers at a later meeting. A number of bids were submitted for the contract. The board decided during its afternoon meeting to accept Mr. Stout's bid, and closed the contract during the evening. Supt. Robert Terhune met with the board of education.

Bids will be received by C. O. Cankey, safety director, until 12 o'clock noon, Aug. 5, for a new automobile for the police department.

Specifications include a six-cylinder, four door sedan, heavy duty six-ply tires, heavy duty generator, special driving light, siren and radio for police calls. Bids are to include the amount allowed for the present car now used by the department.

horns saved the barn and buildings. Streams of water were played on the buildings to prevent them from being ignited by sparks. Russell Heffner is tenant on the farm.

The third blaze, causing no damage, was on the farm of Clarence Sampson, west of the Heiskell farm. This fire was confined along the highway and quickly extinguished.

Scores of men helped fight the fires. In addition to the Williamsport fire department and nearby neighbors, the state highway department had 22 men assisting.

Blamed On Smoke

The three fires are believed to have started from cigars or cigarettes carelessly thrown from a passing auto.

Loss estimated at $350 resulted from a chicken house fire Monday afternoon at the home of Carl Cross, Route 104, west of Circleville. Mr. Cross estimated 150 young chickens were destroyed in the blaze.

Origin of the fire is unknown.

Mr. Cross was working on a fence some distance from the home when the fire was discovered by state highway employees. No one was at the home at the time the fire started.

Many Chickens Escape

About 400 chickens were penned in the house. Many escaped when the door was opened. The local fire department was called but the fire had gained such headway it was impossible to save the building. A nearby smokehouse was damaged. Water on the fire truck and a tank truck of the highway department were used to prevent the flames from spreading.

DECISIVE FIGHT BELIEVED NEAR AS ARMY MOVES

were used against the rebels in a brisk bombardment.

Confident that it has the strength to win, the government organized five strong columns and ordered them to start today to smash the rebels in the north.

A sixth column was sent by train across southern Spain from Alicante on the southeast coast, to attack Seville, the rebels' chief stronghold in the Gibraltar area.

A seventh column was dispatched to Jaen, midway between Alicante and Seville, and small columns to other points.

Buses Used, too

Four busloads of storm troops and two busloads of Socialist militiamen left Madrid to stamp out a small rebel nest at Avila, 55 miles west-northwestward.

Northern columns will proceed toward Valladolid, Burgos, Zaragoza and Toledo.

They will be made up of civil guards, storm guards, loyal regulars, and labor militiamen, with the addition of the air force which has proved entirely loyal.

The government hopes that they will smash the rebellion completely.

News of government successes started during the morning. A message to the interior reported that activity in the Balearic islands off the east coast had been suppressed.

It was announced that civil guards, storm troops and militia dispersed rebels at Alcala de Henares, 20 miles east of Madrid.

Rebel and government forces in the area north of Madrid are expected to meet in force for the decisive battle of the rebellion.

In Rebel Territory

Unless airplanes disperse the rebels, it was indicated that the fight might occur on ground selected by the government in the Sierra de Guadarrama mountains 37 1/2 miles north of the capital. But today's assertions made it likely that the government columns would proceed farther afield to take the war into rebel territory.

Strong government forces expect to invest the rebels' positions at Aaragoza, in old Aragon 140 miles west of Barcelona, before nightfall, it was apparent.

There is every reason to believe that the fighting in prospect will be bitter and sanguinary. On the engagements depends the fate of the rebellion.
